Designing to avoid shaded areas of a site

Shade from trees and landforms can be avoided by building higher on a site or by using skylights or clerestory windows. Taller buildings will increase the amount of shaded area on a site.

© BRANZ 2007

area of shade from trees on hill

house built into hillside house built higher on the hill gets more light (but in this case also creates more shadow behind it)

clerestory windows